Jack Goins, Hawkins County Archivist

Jack Goins retired from AFG Industries in 1999 after 37 years of service. In 2000 he published a book &Idquo; Melungeons and Other Pioneer Families" and was presented the Research Excellence Award from East Tennessee Historical Society for researching the Melungeons and East Tennessee history. In 2004, Goins was appointed County Genealogist on Records Commission by the Hawkins County Commission. In 2005 he was appointed County Archivist and formed a group of volunteers known as Friends of Hawkins County Archive Project. This group was organized to restore the old county records. In 2006 &Idquo; Friends" was chartered by the State as a non-profit organization and was awarded &Idquo; Society Of The Year" by the East Tennessee Historical Society.

A public record is a document in any medium that is used to do the work of government. It belongs to the people, and it is held in trust by a municipal, county, state or national government.

Permanent records are records that must be kept intact, in their original form and medium, as long as possible (for centuries rather than decades) for public inspection. Inactive permanent records are usually kept in archives. Tennessee has an open public records law, which applies to county and municipal records as well as to state records.

Public records are instruments of government, kept to

• Protect the rights of citizens

• Assure the continuity of government

• Account for official actions

• Document state and local historical experience

Public records must be open to the public with the exception of confidential records.
